GETTING INVOLVED AT YOUR WORKPLACE

Why It Matters?

National AccessAbility Week is about raising awareness on accessibility in Canada. CCRW believes it is a great time for Canadian employers to raise awareness on accessibility and inclusion in their workplace.

Actions You Can Take

Share accessibility resources

Email out the accessibility guidelines and resources from the software or tools you use in your workplace.

01

Promote workplace inclusion initiatives

In an all hands meeting or your internal newsletter, highlight your workplace accommodation and inclusion initiatives.

02

Start an accessibility working group

Whether it is a review of internal processes or the accessibility of products or services you offer, start a working group to identify ways of improvement.

03

Offer disability inclusion training

Disability organizations and consulting companies can offer your workforce self-directed or live training to improve knowledge on disability inclusion.

04

Run an accessibility marketing campaign

Your customers, partners, and the community would benefit from learning about how you make your services or product accessible for people with disabilities.

05

Review your workplace policies

Work with a community organization or a disability consulting agency to review your workplace policies for ways to make it more inclusive for people with disabilities.
