GETTING INVOLVED IN YOUR COMMUNITY

Why It Matters?

National AccessAbility Week is about raising awareness on accessibility in Canada. CCRW believes it is a great time for Canadian employers to raise awareness on accessibility and inclusion in their workplace.

Actions You Can Take

01

Share accessibility resources

Connect with organizations who support disability inclusive employment online and share their resources.

02

Ask your workplace if they want to support

If you are passionate about accessibility in the workplace, take this as a leadership opportunity to ask your employer if you can help promote accessibility at your workplace.

03

Research what events are happening

Disability organizations across Canada will be hosting virtual and in-person events during NAAW 2024. Research what is happening and take part.

04

Take disability inclusion training

Disability organizations and consulting companies offer training on disability inclusion in the workplace, take the training to help increase your knowledge.

05

Share your story online

Whether it be through your personal network or through a disability organization who has supported you, share your story on how accessibility has helped you.

06

Take action in your community

Work with local businesses to help them eliminate physical and digital barriers, ensuring their services are accessible to everyone.
